Background

Shawn Kane, American Adoptions; Mike Belfonte, individual; and Austin Vincent, adoption attorney, spoke on this issue in the House Committee.

The House Committee amended the bill to require disclosure on licensure and location of license by the person who advertises the person will place or arrange for placement of a child. The Committee excluded individuals seeking to adopt a child from the advertising requirement.

The proponent of the bill in the Senate Committee was Willa DeCastro, American Adoptions. The opponent of the bill was Austin Vincent, Attorney.

The Senate Committee amended the bill by deleting the requirements on the person who advertises to disclose whether the person is licensed and by what authority and what profession in which the person is licensed. The Committee reinserted the language as the bill was introduced to require the person, who advertises the person will place or arrange for placement of a child, be licensed by the State of Kansas in such person's profession and the person's professional license number be included in the advertisement.

The Senate Committee of the Whole amended the bill to require that the certificate created by the State Registrar of Vital Statistics for any child born in a foreign country but adopted in Kansas, or born and adopted in a foreign country, not make reference to evidence of United States citizenship.

The fiscal note on the original bill indicates there would be no fiscal effect.
